The Health and Human Rights Elective - Spring 2014
Co-instructors: Shannon Murray, murraysc@livemail.uthscsa.edu
Eric Gonzales, gonzalesej@livemail.uthscsa.edu

The Health and Human Rights Elective explores the spectrum of health and human rights issues in a less-than-conventional setting. Our purpose is to ignite conversations about human rights both inside and outside the classroom, transform and expand upon our own ideas of what advocacy means to us, and promote meaningful calls-to-action—all through creative mediums such as short films, social media, and other forms of expression. Even if you have not yet explored these issues, we invite ALL students of multifaceted backgrounds and experiences to join us in the discussion, exploring what we can do as both professionals in advocacy and people.

The course will be held from 12:00-1:00PM on the following dates (all Tuesdays).

September 2
September 9
September 16
September 23
October 7
October 14
October 28
November 4
November 11
November 18

Attendance Requirements
In order to get credit for the elective, you can miss up to three sessions out of the ten.

End-of-Year Project
At the end of the semester, students will craft a project of creative expression that reflects their personal philosophy on human rights. You can use this opportunity to discuss anything related to human rights. At the end of the semester, you will be able to complete a five minute presentation to present your project via a creative medium. You can also choose to work with another person!